Agency Against Corruption Exchanges with International Business Representatives, Advocates Compliance with United Nations Convention against Corruption to Establish Optimal Investment Environment and Competitiveness

Agency Against Corruption organizes Corporate Transparency Practice Forum on December 1st, 2015 at NTUH International Convention Center to maximize exchanges with international chambers of commerce and businesses. This event focuses on sustainable approaches to corporate governance, transparency and integrity. After Taiwan adopted United Nations Convention against Corruption on May 20th, 2015, Minister of Justice Luo Ying-shay invites PwC Taiwan Chairman Dexter M. Chang as keynote speaker in the forum, as well as representatives from public and private sectors to discuss anti-corruption measures in business activities.

In panel discussions, we invite Chi-Hsien Lee (Taipei Exchange), Peter Pu (BSI), Asher Yarden (ISECO in Taipei), Jan Jovy (DEinternational Taiwan) and Guo-Kun Xiao (HP) to offer insights on financial transparency, corporate social responsibility and sustainable operation. Their examples and perspectives will consolidate public-private partnership against corruption.

As United National Convention against Corruption points out in its Forward, corruption is no longer a local issue, but an international phenomenon that influences all countries and economies. International collaboration, therefore, is critical to prevent and control corruption.

Since founded, Agency Against Corruption is committed to transparent systems against corrupted practices and intentions. While corruptions in public sector should be punished and eliminated, briberies and governance frauds from private sector and non-profit organizations also impact local economy. Anti-corruption processes require supports and engagements from individuals and bodies outside of public sector. In the forum, Agency Against Corruption directly communicates with scholars, international companies, business executives and managers to establish interdisciplinary partnership and ethical regulations, and enhance governance for optimal investment environment. We will continue to improve our performances and rankings in international evaluations.
